Historical Context

The Rise of Methodism

In the early 18th century, England was undergoing significant social and religious changes. The Church of England faced challenges from various religious movements, including the Evangelical Revival, which emphasized personal faith, conversion experiences, and the importance of a heartfelt relationship with God. John Wesley, along with his brother Charles and fellow clergyman George Whitefield, played a crucial role in this revival, leading to the formation of the Methodist movement.

Wesley's emphasis on holiness and personal piety distinguished Methodism from other contemporary religious movements. His experiences with the Moravians and his encounters with the Holy Spirit profoundly influenced his understanding of Christian perfection, which he articulated in his writings, particularly in "A Plain Account of Christian Perfection."

Overview of Christian Perfection

Definition of Christian Perfection

Wesley defines Christian perfection as a state of perfect love, a condition in which the believer's heart is filled with love for God and neighbor. This does not imply an absence of sin or moral failure but signifies a heart wholly devoted to God, free from the guilt and power of sin. Wesley believed that Christian perfection is attainable in this life through the grace of God and the work of the Holy Spirit.

Key Components of Christian Perfection

Wesley's doctrine of Christian perfection encompasses several key components:

1. Love: At the core of Wesley's understanding is the commandment to love God and others. Perfect love is not merely an emotional response but a deliberate choice to prioritize God's will and the well-being of others.
2. Faith: A deep, abiding faith in God's promises and an acceptance of His grace are essential for the journey toward perfection.
3. Holiness: The pursuit of holiness involves a continual process of self-examination, repentance, and spiritual growth.
4. Grace: Wesley emphasizes the role of divine grace in enabling believers to achieve perfection. It is through God's grace that individuals are empowered to overcome sin and grow in love.
