Understanding the Foundations of Catholic Social Teaching

Catholic social teaching (CST) is rooted in Scripture, tradition, and the Church's authoritative teachings, offering a framework for addressing social, economic, and political issues. The foundation of CST lies in the belief in the inherent dignity of every human person, created in the image of God, which demands respect and protection. These teachings emerged prominently in the modern era with Pope Leo XIII's encyclical Rerum Novarum in 1891, addressing the rights and duties of workers and employers amid industrialization. Since then, successive popes and Church councils have expanded the body of CST to address contemporary issues like poverty, human rights, environmental stewardship, and peace.

Living justice catholic social teaching in action calls for translating these principles into concrete behaviors and policies that promote social equity and the common good. It is both a theological and practical commitment to transform society through justice-oriented action inspired by the Gospel.

Human Dignity

At the heart of CST is the inviolable dignity of every human being. This principle asserts that all people deserve respect and rights simply by virtue of being human, regardless of social status, ethnicity, or economic condition.

The Common Good

The common good emphasizes that societal conditions should allow all individuals and groups to achieve their full potential and well-being. It calls for social structures that support justice, peace, and equitable access to resources.

Solidarity

Solidarity represents a commitment to stand with the marginalized and oppressed, recognizing their struggles as interconnected with our own. It fosters a sense of global responsibility and mutual support.

Subsidiarity

Subsidiarity advocates that decisions should be made at the most local level possible, empowering communities and individuals to participate in governance and problem-solving.

Preferential Option for the Poor

This principle prioritizes the needs and rights of the poor and vulnerable in social policies and actions, ensuring that justice efforts focus on those most in need.
