Maryland vs. Ohio State Football History

The football rivalry between the University of Maryland Terrapins and the Ohio State University Buckeyes is one that has evolved over the years, characterized by memorable matchups, significant victories, and a unique place within college football. This article delves into the history of these two programs, exploring their competitive encounters, key moments, and the broader context of their rivalry.

Overview of Both Programs

Maryland Terrapins

The Maryland Terrapins, often referred to as the Terps, have a rich football tradition that dates back to 1887. The program has seen various degrees of success, particularly during the mid-20th century. Maryland has claimed two national championships (in 1953 and 1976) and has produced numerous NFL players, contributing to its reputation as a solid program within college football.

Key highlights of Maryland football include:

- Conference Championships: Maryland has won multiple ACC titles (Atlantic Coast Conference) before joining the Big Ten in 2014.
- Bowl Games: The Terps have participated in a variety of bowl games, including the Orange Bowl and the Citrus Bowl, showcasing their competitive spirit.
- Notable Players: The program has produced NFL talents like Boomer Esiason, Darryl Hill, and Stefon Diggs.

Ohio State Buckeyes

In contrast, the Ohio State Buckeyes are one of the most storied programs in college football history. Established in 1890, Ohio State has claimed multiple national championships and is known for its consistent excellence on the field.

Key highlights of Ohio State football include:

- National Championships: The Buckeyes have won eight national titles, with their most recent championship in 2014.
- Conference Dominance: Ohio State is a powerhouse in the Big Ten Conference, consistently contending for conference titles and playoff berths.
- NFL Pipeline: The program has produced countless NFL stars, including recent talents like Ezekiel Elliott, Joey Bosa, and Dwayne Haskins.

Historical Context of the Rivalry

The Maryland-Ohio State football rivalry began after Maryland joined the Big Ten Conference in 2014. Before this, the two programs had only met a handful of times, with their first encounter dating back to 1975. However, since their inclusion in the same conference, the rivalry has intensified and garnered more attention.

Early Encounters

The early matchups between Maryland and Ohio State were sporadic, with only a few games played in the 1970s and 1980s. Some notable early encounters include:

- 1975: The first meeting took place at Ohio Stadium, where the Buckeyes emerged victorious.

- 1983: The two teams met again, but the game did not have significant implications for either program at the time.

These early games were largely overshadowed by other rivalries within both programs, but they set the stage for future encounters.

Joining the Big Ten Conference

Maryland's move to the Big Ten in 2014 marked a significant turning point in the rivalry. The Terps sought to enhance their competitive profile, and the Buckeyes were eager to expand their reach in the East Coast market. This shift brought about more regular matchups and heightened competition.
