History of Our Lady of Good Success

The devotion to Our Lady of Good Success originates from a series of Marian apparitions to Sister Mariana de Jesús Torres in Quito, Ecuador, during the early 17th century. Sister Mariana, a nun in the Conceptionist Order, reported several visions of the Virgin Mary between 1610 and 1634. These apparitions emphasized profound spiritual messages about faith, perseverance, and the challenges the Church would face in future centuries. The title "Our Lady of Good Success" reflects the hope and confidence placed in Mary's intercession for triumph over adversity and grace-filled outcomes.

Origins of the Apparitions

The apparitions occurred within the Conceptionist convent where Sister Mariana lived. Mary appeared to her wearing a blue mantle, symbolizing purity and protection, and conveyed specific prophecies about the Church and the world. These revelations were documented and preserved by the convent and later disseminated to the wider Catholic community. The historical context of the early 1600s, including political unrest and religious challenges, underscores the importance of these messages of hope and success.

Development of the Devotion

Following the apparitions, the devotion to Our Lady of Good Success gradually spread, especially in Latin America. The Virgin's image was venerated in Quito and other regions, attracting pilgrims seeking her aid. Over time, the Church recognized the spiritual significance of these apparitions and the devotion that emerged. The novena dedicated to Our Lady of Good Success became a popular prayer practice to invoke her powerful intercession.
