Historical Context of the Boston Tea Party

The Boston Tea Party occurred on December 16, 1773, and was a direct response to the Tea Act imposed by the British Parliament. This act not only granted the British East India Company a monopoly on tea sales in the American colonies but also allowed the company to sell tea at a lower price than local merchants, effectively undercutting them. This situation incited anger among colonists, who viewed it as yet another example of taxation without representation.

Key Events Leading to the Boston Tea Party

1. The Stamp Act (1765): This was one of the first direct taxes imposed on the colonies, leading to widespread protests and the formation of groups like the Sons of Liberty.
2. The Townshend Acts (1767): These acts taxed various goods, including tea, and sparked a boycott of British goods.
3. The Tea Act (1773): Enacted to save the struggling British East India Company, this act further inflamed colonial resentment.
4. The Boston Massacre (1770): This violent confrontation between colonists and British troops heightened tensions and solidified opposition to British rule.

The culmination of these events led to the Boston Tea Party, where colonists, disguised as Mohawk Indians, boarded ships and dumped 342 chests of tea into Boston Harbor. This act of defiance became a symbol of resistance and galvanized support for the revolutionary cause.
