Understanding the Purpose of the Sisterhood Round

The sisterhood round is a vital phase in the sorority recruitment process where current members engage with PNMs in a more intimate and informal setting. This round aims to provide both sides with the opportunity to connect beyond surface-level introductions and understand individual personalities, values, and interests. The conversations during this stage help determine which PNMs align well with the sorority's culture and sisterhood ideals. Therefore, the questions asked should be designed to elicit genuine responses that reveal character, motivations, and interpersonal skills. Recognizing the purpose of this round ensures that questions to ask PNMs during sisterhood round are purposeful and contribute to a meaningful evaluation.

Personal and Values-Based Questions

Asking personal and values-based questions allows current members to gain insight into the core beliefs and principles that guide a potential new member's decisions and lifestyle. These questions are essential to understand if a PNM shares the sorority's values and can contribute positively to the sisterhood environment. Open-ended questions encourage PNMs to reflect and express themselves authentically.

Examples of Personal and Values-Based Questions

- What qualities do you value most in a friendship?
- Can you share a moment when you had to overcome a significant challenge?
- What does sisterhood mean to you?
- How do you handle conflicts or disagreements with others?
- Which personal achievement are you most proud of and why?

Academic and Career Aspirations

Understanding a PNM's academic interests and career goals is fundamental during the sisterhood round. These questions help assess the potential member's motivation, time management skills, and future orientation. Additionally, they shed light on how a PNM might contribute to the sorority's academic environment and professional development initiatives.

Questions to Explore Academic and Career Goals

- What is your major, and why did you choose it?
- How do you balance academics with extracurricular activities?
- What are your career aspirations after graduation?
- Have you participated in any internships or research related to your field?
- How do you stay motivated during difficult academic periods?

Social and Extracurricular Interests

Social compatibility and shared interests play a significant role in building a cohesive sisterhood. Asking about extracurricular activities and hobbies provides insight into a PNM's personality and lifestyle. These questions help identify common ground and potential contributions to the sorority's events and community service projects.

Key Questions About Social and Extracurricular Life

- What are some of your favorite hobbies or pastimes?
- Are you involved in any clubs, sports, or organizations on campus?
- How do you like to spend your weekends or free time?
- Have you participated in any community service or volunteer work?
- What kind of social events do you enjoy attending?

Questions to Gauge Compatibility and Group Dynamics

Compatibility with the existing sisterhood and the ability to contribute positively to group dynamics is a critical consideration during recruitment. Questions in this category help evaluate how a PNM might interact with others, handle group situations, and embody the spirit of cooperation and respect.

Examples of Compatibility and Group Dynamic Questions

- How do you typically approach making new friends?
- Can you describe a time when you worked as part of a team?
- What role do you usually take in group settings?
- How do you support your friends when they are going through tough times?
- What does being a good sister mean in a group context?

Tips for Asking Effective Questions During Sisterhood Round

Asking questions to PNMs during the sisterhood round requires tact, attentiveness, and a genuine interest in their responses. Effective questioning enhances the quality of conversation and fosters a comfortable atmosphere for openness. It is important to listen actively and avoid interrupting, while also encouraging elaboration when answers are brief.

Best Practices for Conducting Sisterhood Round Conversations

- Prepare a diverse set of questions covering various topics to get a well-rounded understanding.
- Maintain a friendly and open demeanor to help PNMs feel at ease.
- Follow up on interesting points with probing questions to deepen the discussion.
- Avoid overly personal or controversial questions that may cause discomfort.
- Take notes discreetly to remember key details about each PNM for later evaluation.

Frequently Asked Questions

What is the purpose of the sisterhood round during PNMs?

The sisterhood round aims to help both current members and PNMs get to know each other better on a personal level, fostering genuine connections and ensuring a good fit within the sorority's community.

What types of questions are appropriate to ask PNMs during the sisterhood round?

Questions that are open-ended, friendly, and focused on values, interests, hobbies, and experiences are appropriate. Avoid overly personal or controversial topics to maintain a comfortable and welcoming atmosphere.

Can you give examples of good questions to ask PNMs during sisterhood?

Examples include: 'What do you enjoy doing in your free time?', 'What qualities do you value most in a friend?', 'Why are you interested in joining our sorority?', and 'How do you balance school and extracurricular activities?'

How can questions during the sisterhood round help PNMs feel more comfortable?

By asking genuine, thoughtful questions, sisters show interest and create a welcoming environment, which helps PNMs open up, share their true selves, and feel more at ease during the recruitment process.

Should questions focus more on PNMs' personal interests or academic achievements?

While academic achievements are important, the sisterhood round is better suited for questions about personal interests, values, and experiences to build connections beyond academics.

How can I ensure my questions are inclusive during the sisterhood round?

Avoid questions that assume certain backgrounds or experiences, and instead ask open-ended questions that allow PNMs from diverse backgrounds to share their unique perspectives.

Is it appropriate to ask PNMs about their goals and aspirations during the sisterhood round?

Yes, asking about goals and aspirations is appropriate and helps both parties understand how the PNM's ambitions align with the sorority's values and support system.

What should I avoid asking PNMs during the sisterhood round?

Avoid questions that are too personal, such as those about relationships, finances, or sensitive family matters, as well as any questions that could make PNMs feel judged or uncomfortable.
